To Whom It May Concern:

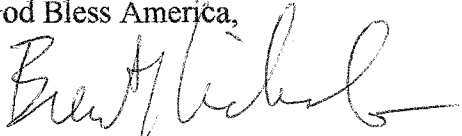

Your store has been one of my favorite places to shop for quite some time because of the great prices and wide range of products found there. However, I recently learned something about Target that may prevent me from ever shopping there again.

Recently, one of my most trustworthy friends confided in me that Target is one of his favorite stores too, but he pronounced it "Tar-zhay." I corrected him and let him know that I had always pronounced your store as "Tar-get." My good friend was adamant, however, that many people pronounce your store the first way with a French accent. I'm not sure which way is correct and that is where my problem lies.

Ever since the war with the Iraqi infidels, I have boycotted all French affiliated stores and goods. My hate for France has been strong ever since they refused to aide in our crusade against Saddam and his Islamic minions. I eat "freedom" fries and "freedom" toast now. I want nothing to do with that cowardly nation, and I especially do not want to give them any of my American money.

Please let me know whether Tar-zhay/Tar-get has any ties with that despicable, yellow-bellied, peace-loving nation, France. I would hate to stop shopping at one of my favorite stores, but I am prepared to start using Wal-Mart.

God Bless America,

Brent Nichols
